Does latest Obama protest go too far?

A new demonstration against President Obama's upcoming visit to Notre Dame's graduation ceremony is causing its own controversy.

A group called the Center for Bio Ethical Reform has begun showing graphic abortion photos near the campus.

Some think the group has crossed the line and want the protestors stopped, but the South Bend Police Department says the group's right to demonstrate is protected under the first amendment of the Constitution.

"There's nothing law enforcement can do," said Capt. Phil Trent. "As a matter of fact, there are very few things we can do that wouldn't be seen as interference or violating someone's constitutional rights."

Trent says as long as the demonstrators don't go on to anyone's private property, they're within their rights.

The group plans to protest every day until graduation on May 17.

Notre Dame's invitation to the president has drawn criticism from many Catholics because of his stance on abortion and embryonic stem cell research.

Abortion is murder. Anyone who doubts this fact needs to try abortion on themselves until they begin to understand reality. Complaints about how unpleasant the images are need to be referred to the baby slaughterers who do the crime of abortion in the first place. Denying the ugly reality of Another, "I'm pro-life but,..." person. Michelle, yes, abortion IS horrid; many times more horrid than simply looking at a picture of it.

If your children were truly hysterical (which I highly doubt being a pro-life activist for many years and never seeing any children respond to these signs in that manner) they took their cue from you. Having had a miscarriage myself, I realize that abortion is far different and would not even think of comparing the two.

What are you accusing these protesters of threatening others with? Continuing to exercise their First Amendment right of free speech? Oh yes, now that IS scary.

Why not say if you're for or against Obama, Michelle? Are you ashamed of who you voted for? Why would you vote for someone you don't want to admit supporting?

Under aged drinking, illicit drug use, rape, child molestation, sex trade - these are already illegal. But child killing by way of abortion IS LEGAL and must be protested against until the rights of the Unborn are restored.

You do have the freedom to protect your own children Michelle, but if you're truly pro-life as you claim, you would be glad to see others doing something for the 1 in 4 children who will experience an excruciatingly gruesome death. Maybe that's the reason the images bother you so much. Are you guilty of not doing enough yourself to end legalized abortion? Or, is there an abortion(s) in your past of which you have not yet truly repented?

The liberal media refuses to show these images. The only way we can show the public this holocaust that We the People tolerate as the law of the land is to take the images to the streets. Unless abortion becomes something more than an abstract word, the slaughter will continue.

You ask, "When did everyone get so desensitized to death and violence that something like this could be legal?" Of course the devil has been working toward this goal ever since being tossed out of heaven but in 1973, the US Supreme Court trampled over laws which to some degree

restricted abortion in America and abortion became legal in all 50 states for virtually any reason through all 9 months of pregnancy up to the moment of birth.

Oh yes, we understand it's shocking for people to see these images. And we need to continue rocking their world so much that they will no longer support child killers like Obama in future elections.

Michelle, I completely understand your position on CBR's graphic photos. I too am concerned about children, post-abortive and post-miscarriage women viewing these horrific images.

However, I would offer the thought that the country in which it is legal for these images to be shown is the same country in which it is legal to commit what these images depict. You ask when desensitization to death and violence occurred to allow these images to legally be shown. It's been happening in the U.S. since the mid-60s, when contraception became widely used, and abortion followed as its backup plan. When abortion became legalized, child abuse skyrocketed. If children can be killed in their mothers' wombs, what should be the safest place a child could reside, why should anyone be surprised when that same mother beats her defenseless child to death? And why should anyone be surprised when children begin to beat and kill one another? Violence begets violence. I hope you are able to explain to your children what abortion is, why we must protest its existence until it is banned forever from our world. I too am post-miscarriage. I will keep you all in my prayers.
