We had an excellent first GAP at University of California, Riverside in 2012. Some students were so immersed in discussions that they stayed after we began taking down the display. A man asked Lois Cunningham questions about the signs; he then identified himself as a bio-ethics teacher and said he was actually covering abortion that week and was going to tell his students to come see GAP.

“ *After seeing those pictures,
I knew I couldn't let her get an abortion!* ”

Male student who saw GAP at University of Tennessee and then saved his own sister's baby.

CBR Intern Seth Gruber (at left) adeptly managed this lively crowd discussion that lasted more than an hour with University of California, Riverside students at the May 31-June 1, 2012 Genocide Awareness Project. Several pro-abortion students kept returning to debate between or after their classes. It was heartening to hear some pro-life students jump in and reply to the erroneous arguments offered by abortion advocates.
